"W.J. O'Donnel of Ottawa, who is visiting his sons near Edmonton and who made a trip up here during the year 1885 has a distinct recollection of one Donald McLeod who travelled between Edmonton and Calgary in those early days. Mr. O'Donnel made the trip to Edmonton in one of McLeod's buckboards and paid $25 for transportation. The way McLeod managed was to drive a buckboard himself and take one passenger. His other horses and vehicle were let out to two travellers for $50 each, one paying half. Thus on every trip he made $75."
